UNICORN HAND PUPPET

ELECT: Domain: #4 Cognition
4.1 Self- regulation – regulating attention becomes more selective, planned and adaptable
4.2 Problem Solving – planning to achieve goals, solving problems of more complexity
4.3 Representation – creating complex 2D and 3D drawings

Materials Needed:

- white heavy cardstock or thin carboard painted white
- silver cardstock or thin carboard painted silver
- ¾-inch circle punch or cut the holes yourself
- small googly eyes or draw them on!
- multi-colored yarn
- hole punch
- pink marker
- scissors
- tacky glue
- glue stick

1. From your white heavy cardstock, cut out a unicorn body, neck and head, and two ears. See the picture collage below for reference. Cut out a shiny silver horn from your silver cardstock.

2. Punch four 3/4-inch holes in the bottom of the unicorn body with your circle punch. These are the puppet holes for your fingers.

3. Punch out a hole at the end of the unicorn body with your hole punch so you can attach a tail.

4. Cut a strand of yarn, probably about a foot long. I just cut it to a length where I had several different colors showing. Fold the piece of yarn in half.

5. Thread the folded end of the yarn up through the tail hole so that you'll have a loop. Thread the other end of the yarn through the loop and pull it closed tightly around the tail hole. See picture collage for reference. Cut off any excess yarn at the end of the tail.

6. Finish your playful unicorn puppets by gluing on a googly eye and using your pink marker to draw a nostril and mouth on your unicorn.
